Former Bills All-Pro guard, Ruben Brown, was a speaker at the the MQC.

The Monday Quarterback Club, originally known as the Touchdown Club, was formed in 1960 by a group of Buffalo business people who met for lunch with Bills' owner Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. on Mondays following Bills' home games. Changing the name to the Monday Quarterback Club in 1979, the Club continues to meet on selected Mondays during the season, and also hosts other special events.

Members share these things in common: a passion for the Buffalo Bills and professional football in Western New York; a desire to network among their business peers; and the enjoyment of talking and hearing about the team and NFL football.
